

How Does Contact Tracing Work?

You've Tested Positive for COVID-19

A public health worker will contact you from your local health department. They will ask you about the places you've been and who you've spent time with recently.

Your information is confidential and will not be shared. You will not be asked about your immigration status or your social security number.

The people you were around will also be contacted and told they may have been exposed. They will NOT be told your name or any personal information.

The public health worker will connect you to medical care and help you find resources if needed. They will stay in touch with you to see how you are doing.

You've Been Around Someone Who Tested Positive With COVID-19

A public health worker will call you from your local health department and give you instructions. You will also be asked to separate yourself from others in your home to protect those around you.

They will give you instructions on how to get tested at no cost to you and medical care, if needed. They will also connect you to resources and support if needed.

They will stay in touch with you to see if you start to develop symptoms or need access to medical care. You will be contacted one of the following ways:

- Phone call
- Text
- Email
